A Big Pleasure

Since I was little, I was told by my parents that I needed to learn to enjoy what I am doing. Of course, I thought they were forcing me to do chores in the house. Somehow, I started to believe that they were brain-washing me, and everybody around me. To begin with, my relatives, and my friends, they told me that my parents were using me.

Perhaps it was true. I have to tell you, though, that slowly I started to learn the pleasure of doing things. Eventually, I found myself pretty busy doing many things. I graduated high school at the age of 16, and the very next year I started to work. My work schedule was from 7am to 5pm, and then I was going to the University from 5:30pm to 9pm. I barely had enough time to do homework in the night. Basically, I was sleeping four hours a day.

The beginning of my adult life was about doing things, keeping myself busy. I really like my life, because by the influence of my parents, I became a person with purpose, being productive, and always enjoying what I do. Eventually, I realized that not everyone had been blessed with that type of life. I have the opportunity to observe the behavior of people. Sadly I realize that a lot of people do things just because, because they were told to, but without understanding, the importance of enjoying what they do.

I have met many people that are frustrated with their own lives, with their careers, with their Jobs. That is not my case. The good Lord allowed me to switch from the secular world to ministry in my 30s. That gave me the opportunity to learn many things in the business world, and at the same time, get prepared for my career as a minister. However, the main ingredients of this wonderful recipe were already inside of me.

Picture your future, develop your skills, learn more, work with people, envision the tasks, and get the job done. Go to the next next objective. I give thanks to the good Lord for my grandparents, my parents, for my teachers, for my pastors and my mentors. Also for the wonderful people that have been in a place in my life to teach me this wonderful lesson, that it is a big pleasure when you enjoy what you do. I wish you that kind of life.

Elijah and John the Baptist

There are several similarities between Elijah and John the Baptist. The first one is they were eccentric. We understand that everyone has his own personality, but Elijah had a very peculiar personality, as well as John the Baptist. Some people might say that they were too much into themselves, and they may be right. But what can you do with someone who is absolutely passionate about God, and God's calling for his life?

They were both very strong about the message they needed to share with Israel. Both were willing to do anything, and confront anyone, in order to share the message the Lord God gave them.

Undoubtedly, both were men of great faith. They believed and trusted in God enormously, and they saw things that just a few other prophets were able to see.

Elijah saw a miracle of rain being stopped, and rain coming back to earth. Elijah saw fire coming down from heaven, to burn his sacrifice, like nobody else did. Elijah killed pagans with the strength of God, like nobody else did.

John was filled with the Holy Spirit ever since he was in his mother's womb, unlike anyone else. John had a diet like no one else had. John delivered the most direct message from God in public to a political leader, like no one else did.

But there is one big difference between the two of them, John was willing to see others grow and become better than him. Elijah was not too much into seeing Elisha receiving that type of anointing. That makes them very different.

Although you might feel intrigued with these two wonderful men of God, the question you need to ask yourself is: Am I doing what the Lord God wants me to do? Am I afraid of becoming eccentric or weird by obeying Him? And more importantly, when the time comes for tough decisions, are you willing to give your life for the Lord like they did?

Have you ever considered a world without laws? Laws play a crucial role in maintaining justice and order in our lives. Without them, the world could descend into chaos. Besides grace, God also expects us to live in accordance with His laws. Obeying God's commandments is a way to demonstrate our love for Him. Listen carefully to this study.

Developing the ability to manage anger is a valuable trait that you should nurture. Anger has ensnared countless individuals in the trap of sin. God designed marriage between a man and a woman with a specific purpose. This sacred union serves as the means through which the Lord's intention for human procreation is realized. God has instilled in us a natural sexual desire to fulfill this divine purpose. According to Biblical teachings, sexual relations are intended for married couples, precisely between a man and a woman.

Do Your Best To Reconcile With Others

There are moments in life when you just don't know what to do with your relationships. Life can be so confusing on occasion because of the sufferings we all live. Sometimes those sufferings are the result of injustice in this world, like right now as we see in this world in the Middle East. Sometimes the sufferings come as a result of accidents, illnesses, even wrong doings, intentionally executed by evildoers, or hurting others. Sometimes the sufferings are the result of death, divorce. Suffering in life is real. When we go through all those sufferings, we say things that might hurt others deeply. We can become cruel, because when we are hurting, sometimes we explode.

Eventually we all calm down, and that is when we have the opportunity to think about what is going on. It is precisely during those moments when you need to remember the words from our Lord Jesus who told us to search for reconciliation in one another.

It's up to you, when the time comes, whether it's because you need to go and ask for forgiveness, or whether you are going to be willing to forgive when someone asks you for forgiveness. The truth is that in the eyes of the Lord, it really doesn't matter whose fault it is. The challenge is that our good Lord is always expecting our willingness to reconcile. Do your best to reconcile with others. If you need to say you're sorry, do so. And if you need to forgive, then do it. Reconciliation is needed for our own souls. That is how we please God.
